

Choose HomeWard Bound

Transitional care is more than a label or a place; it's a care model that surrounds you with experts who are focused on your recovery. With these experts by your side, you can increase the chances of a successful recovery and lessen the likelihood of returning to the hospital.

Choose Quabbin Valley Healthcare's HomeWard Bound program, and you're choosing attentive caregivers and patient-centered care in the best possible environment. You'll be on your way to a more successful outcome.

Transitional Care

After a hospital stay, you may need continued care before returning home. That extra care could be additional skilled nursing services, short-term rehabilitation, or both. We call this “transitional care.”

Whether your hospital stay was for an illness, surgery, unexpected health event, accident, injury, or for treatment of a chronic illness, your choice for transitional care is an important factor in the overall success of your recovery.

The best way to receive transitional care is in a program like the HomeWard Bound program at Quabbin Valley Healthcare (QVHC), where you will be surrounded by highly qualified professionals who work hard to help you return home with the greatest possible strength and confidence.

QVHC has been part of the community for over 56 years. Our HomeWard Bound program—the area’s only transitional care program—provides a level of care that no other skilled nursing program in the North Quabbin Region offers, all in an updated environment.
